College Major Research and Selection

- I need to choose a college major
  - No
    - I already have selected a college major.
    - Skip this step in the college admission process.
  - Yes
    - I plan to apply to college with an undecided major.
    - Start the process of researching and selecting a college major.
      - Complete a self assessment of your interests. What subjects or topics do you enjoy?
      - Assess your skills and talents. What are your strengths and abilities? What skills do you have?
      - Assess what you value with work and in the work environment. Do you value working alone or in groups, being innovative, working outdoors, working in a fast-paced or slow-and-steady environment, etc.?
      - Think about careers you might enjoy. Do you think you would like researching scientific topics, solving complex concepts, designing items to market for sale, counseling young people, or managing people?
      - Use online search engines to analyze suggested college majors and related careers to evaluate if any majors are of high enough interest to declare on college your college applications.
      - Use online search engines to assist with selecting a college major. Enter your preferences regarding the above (interests, strengths, etc.) and evaluate suggested college majors and related careers.
      - Use the college major you select as a factor in choosing colleges to apply to.
